Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 81, 82, 84-91, 93-96 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Mathews (2004/0106999).

With respect to the claims, Mathews discloses a kit for providing a nucleus pulposus replacement material for a human patient comprising a device (30') for distracting two adjacent vertebral bodies of the human patient defining a disc space therebetween and delivering a flowable nucleus pulposus replacement material into the disc space including a body 34' having a proximal portion a distal portion comprising a fixed shaped sized and configured to distract the disc space of the human patient, a longitudinal passageway (32a' and 32b') extending through the body and defining a first opening into the disc space; and a flowable curable nucleus pulposus replacement material having properties that upon introduction into and curing within the disc space function as a nucleus pulposus replacement; as best seen in FIG.3c and paras [0044--0050]. Mathews also discloses that the expandable portion can have various shapes and is sized such that the disc space is distracted to the desired disc space height and also to establish lordosis if desired or necessary, as best seen in FIG.10a-17a and para [0044].

Response to Amendment

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 81,82,84-91,93-96 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
